Title

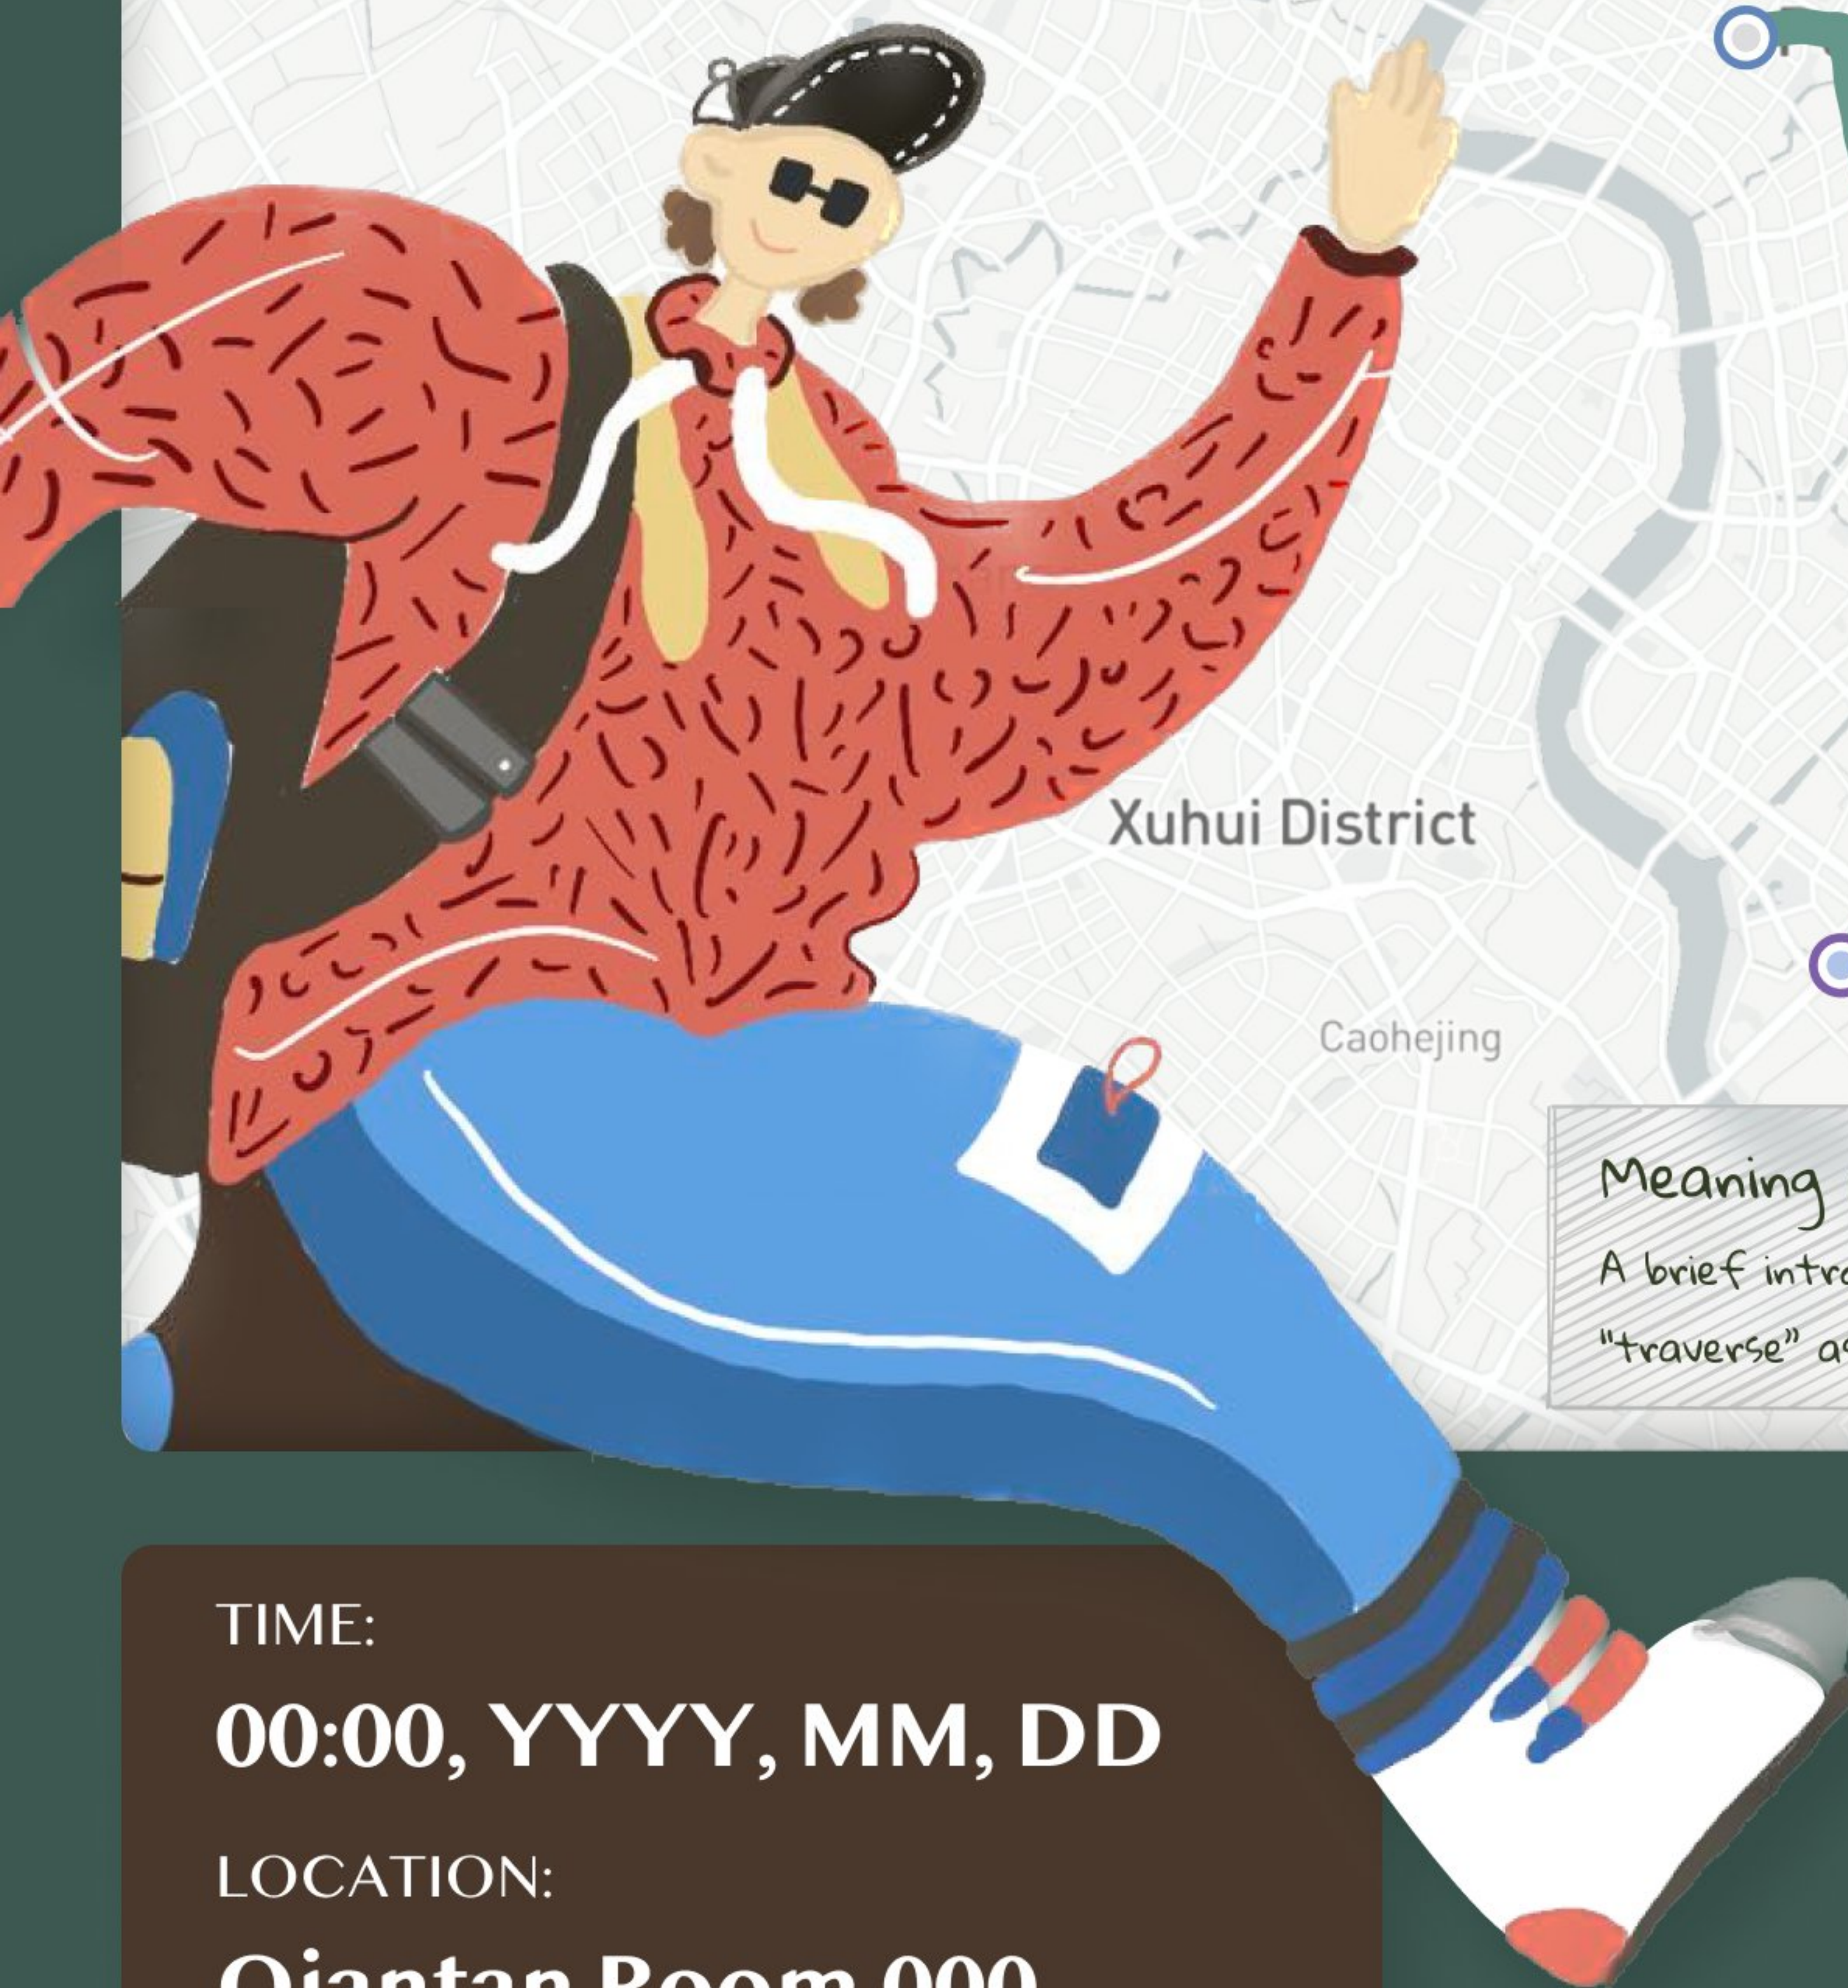

Beyond Language Barriers,
The New Way to "Frame" Language as Global Communicators

Based on their courses together teaching linguistic conventions of "framing" across cultural settings, global communications strategist Dan Bullock and intercultural linguistics academic Raúl Sánchez, both co-authors and NYU professors, reveal new research-based approach based on the larger framework of "Framing Theory."

IF David Pe

We live our lives in constant flux, managing circumstances and events in which we may or may not have control. When confronted with constant change, how do we develop the capacity to respond and manage? How can reflective practice help us develop the tools to be resilient and react in the face of adversity. David will be sharing stories about growing up as a first generation Chinese-Cambodia-American, getting off academic probation, and his many pivots.

Who Am I: Finding my voice through fear, confidence and humility

Paul Chu

In a world of many competing voices and influence, how do we create our own identities? My journey of becoming required me to look inwards, discover my passions, strengths and motivations, and find the confidence to assert myself. As we navigate the world and life stages, knowing who you are will be the anchor through the waves of change. The project of self is never ending though, which is also the beauty of growth.

Global Impact: Building Bridges Across Cultures and Mindsets

Maria Pastorelli

Cross-cultural interactions and understanding are more and more crucial in our globalized world: increasing diversity and global collaboration in the workforce require us to learn how to navigate cross-cultural environments effectively. Living in China is a great training ground to learn to acknowledge the complexity of dealing with cultural differences in a team with diverse backgrounds. Acknowledging and embracing differences or ignoring them, what is the best way forward?

A chosen land out of nowhere Linjing Jiang

This speech will start from a poem by the Austrian poet Ingeborg Bachmann titled "Bohemia Lies by the Sea". It depicts a marginal area between land and sea, a land of reconciliation and redemption out of nowhere (because Bohemia is geographically a total inland). Through this poem, we may also find a never-ending flux, a "bordering" way towards the core, towards a chosen land with hope.

Traveling, Creating, Adapting Cynthia Corona

"A donde fueres haz lo que vieres", or "Where you go, do what you see" in English, this quote from Cynthia's mother stuck with her since she embarked on her journey to explore the world as a student. With things being constantly in flux, Cynthia's speech explores how she adapted to change yet stays true to herself and her culture.

Breaking the Mold, Choosing a Profession through Sustainability

Xenia Sidorenka

Even the craziest ideas can lead to solutions for a better future, but what questions should we ask ourselves to drive positive change in our careers? How do we choose a profession that promotes sustainability while keeping in mind our passion?

About 2023 TEDxNYUShanghai annual conference

The 2023 TEDxNYUShanghai Spring Conference will be the first TEDx conference at NYU Shanghai Qiantan campus, joining the school to celebrate the 10-year anniversary of NYU Shanghai.

Why 'FLUX'?

Our team nominated the theme of this conference 'Flux', commemorating the constant change of NYU Shanghai. Flux is the constant change in physics, but it isn't merely just a physics term. It is a state where we constantly evolve as time passes, economically, socially, and spiritually. Flux is a change continuous and resolute, bringing in changes good and bad. As the philosopher John Locke says, "Things of this world are in so constant a flux, that nothing remains long in the same state." Like time, we too must remain in a time of flux, of determination and boldness to face the issues of the future.
